The Philomathean Society.

This Society has existed for more than half a century, and during that time twelve hundred and sixty-seven individuals have enjoyed its privileges. There is no better index of its flourishing condition for this long period, than the fact of its having enrolled among its members so large a number. And no more convincing proof of the benefits derived from the Society can be offered, than a reference to the honorable names that appear in the catalogue. The reputation that it has justly obtained, is a sufficient recommendation of its character to those who may wish to participate in the advantages of such an institution.

Philomathean Library and Reading Room.

Connected with the Society is a well selected Library of some 3,000 volumes, embracing all the valuable and popular works of the age. Also, a Reading-Room, furnished with the best Periodicals and Reviews.
